Call for projects and initiatives on children's mental health

The Child Rights Connect Taskforce on Children's Right to Mental Health is looking for projects and initiatives designed and led by children (under 18) that support children's mental health or their access to mental health services.

For example, projects and initiatives that...

- raise awareness about mental health at school or on social media,
- ask adults and decision-makers to do better,
- help children access mental health services,
- any other idea that takes care of children's mental health.

Why now?

At the United Nations (UN), children's mental health will be in focus next year. It starts in March 2027, when the UN Human Rights Council - where countries meet to talk about human rights - will hold its Annual Day on the Rights of the Child on this topic. We want decision-makers to hear what children think and what they are already doing!

Find HERE the child-friendly note about the Annual Day on the Rights of the Child and how to engage.

What happens next?

1. If you share your project, it will be part of a collection of projects and initiatives on the Child Rights Connect website.
2. You can join online meetings to talk about your experience with other children who have similar projects and meet with UN representatives who are working on this topic.
3. You can stay in touch and hear about more opportunities like this.

How to apply?

You can share your project and express your interest to participate through this SURVEY.

Deadline: 27 November 2026.

Important to know!

We follow our Child Safeguarding Policy to make sure all children are safe in this activity. Please read the accessible version HERE!
