

Human Rights Council
63rd regular session of the Human Rights Council
30 September 2026

Item 8: General debate on follow-up to and implementation of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action - General Debate

Madame Vice-President,

Child Rights Connect delivers this statement on behalf of 185 civil society organisations.¹

On 7 and 23 September, the High Commissioner warned that the work of the UN treaty bodies - the legal backbone of the UN human rights system - is endangered by chronic underfunding and the ongoing liquidity crisis and issued an urgent call for help and support.

However, the challenges are not purely financial. Chronic underfunding, States falling short of their reporting obligations, and growing operational constraints represent a political crisis and, ultimately, a human rights crisis.

OHCHR and the treaty bodies themselves have made several proposals through the treaty body strengthening process, which could be piloted, on how to move towards greater predictability, harmonization and digital transformation. Yet, the system continues not only at a standstill, but in a downward spiral. In 2025, a 40% reduction in meeting time resulted in approximately 30% fewer reviews. The situation has worsened in 2026, adding further delays to an already backlogged system.²

We call on States to reaffirm their political and financial commitment for a strong, fully accessible and effective treaty body system:

1. ensuring sustainable funding through the UN regular budget, allowing to reduce review backlogs and ensuring foreseeability of States reviews sufficiently in advance;
2. providing dedicated resources for hybrid modalities that enable meaningful participation by civil society and other stakeholders; and
3. investing in accessible digitalization tools without further delay.

We call on all parts of the UN, including OHCHR, UNOG and the DGACM, to coordinate and overcome any administrative obstacles to treaty body strengthening.³

Not acting decisively in this direction is disengaging from human rights protection when it is needed the most.

Thank you.

¹ Note: Due to the reduced speaking time allocated for oral statements at the 63rd session of the Human Rights Council, an abbreviated version of the statement was delivered during the session. The version published here reflects the full text of the statement. The list of signatories has also been updated following the delivery to reflect the latest confirmed list of supporting organisations.
